For 30 years Farm Sanctuary has been rescuing farm animals from the most dire of circumstances and providing them with a unique living situation that can only be described as an animal utopia. Based on 175 acres of land in Watkins Glen, New York, the organization is home to hundreds of cows, chickens, goats, sheep, pigs, and many other animals who get to roam free, have regular access to food and shelter, and are surrounded by caretakers and friends, both animal and human. Now, to celebrate and showcase the organization's work, their national shelter director and resident animal whisperer, Susie Coston, lovingly tells the most memorable stories of Farm Sanctuary's residents over the years. Through 250 full-color photos accompanied by essays and informative captions, readers will learn about the circumstances of animals' rescue and their new lives at the farm—their names and ages, personalities, and the bonds they share with one another and the people looking after them. This is a beautiful gift book and a touching reminder to embrace life, to show kindness to our fellow humans and animals, and to help those who are most vulnerable.
